the sole purpose of Philosophy is to show
the right way to live (or words to that effect).
He does this by grounding Philosophy
right where it belongs - in Nature. He also brings along the Human Species for a ride.

His appreciation for the complexity of nature and human experience is almost as astounding as his ability to articulate it. There are parts of this book that are outdated, but then it's almost a century old. He does a great job of predicting some of the problems faced by What can I say? I think the world needs another John Dewey.
